THINKING WITH EMOTIONS

Lesson for August 6, 1978

Background Scripture: Acts 21:17 through 25:27.
Devotional Reading: Psalms 118:6-9.

Rev. Althouse

A friend of mine, A Palestinian (Arab) "Christian" with a history of heart disease, is forced to do hard labor in an Israeli prison. The crime of this man with no previous criminal record: he made the mistake of following the lead of many of his Israeli neighbors and began work on an addition to his house before his permit had been approved. Fined an enormous sum of money and sentenced to hard labor, he was not permitted a Palestinian lawyer to defend him. A normally peaceful, law-abiding citizen, it is difficult for him to manage his anger.

They Supposed

Another friend of mine is an Israeli professor. For several years he risked his life posing as an Arab to bring Jewish children safely out of Arab lands where they faced persecution. He has lost many friends in battle and he never knows when his wife goes to the supermarket or department store whether she will be the victim of an Arab guerilla bombing. He too, normally a peaceful and civilized man, is frustrated and angry.

One is a Christian, the other a Jew: both of them are thinking with their emotions! Both are letting anger and frustration cloud their ability to think and their capacity to live by their own religious principles. It is impossible to reason with these men. A little bit of truth and a lot of emotion are holding sway.

It is hardly a novel situation for the Middle East — or even the world. For example, it is just such a situation we find in Acts 21 with Paul in Jerusalem and, as usual, in trouble as well! The ingredients of the trouble are familiar. First, there are troublemakers who "stirred up all the crowd." (Like the "poor," I suppose, we always have with us the troublemakers.) Secondly, we have a little bit of truth which is greatly distorted. They had seen Paul in the Temple and they had seen him with Trophimus, an Ephesian Greek, so "they supposed that Paul had brought him into the temple."

Because Of The Uproar

Manipulating the prejudices and emotions of the people, the troublemakers provoked such an uproar that the tribune "could not learn the facts." Nothing is more helpful when you're on the wrong side of the facts than a good, old-fashioned uproar.

Finally, as so often happens, we have a situation completely out of hand. Stirring up the crowd to oppose Paul and threaten him, the troublemakers now have a mob on their hands that wants to kill Paul. When we think with our emotions, someone is going to get hurt, perhaps even die.

Despite a Lord who taught the primacy of love and a Saviour who gave himself on a cross, Christians have all too often been numbered among the mobs and armies who, thinking with their emotions, have allowed the cross to continue as a symbol of man's shame.
